

WESTERN PACIFIC OPPORTUNITIES STIR AMBITION ON RIO GRANDE

Which of the Rio Grande men will reach out for business in the struggle to put the new road upon a paying basis. It is believed that a number of men now holding positions with the Rio Grande who have demonstrated their ability to manage will be transferred to the Western Pacific. This will leave vacancies on the Rio Grande to be filled, and for that reason every man within striking distance of a good position is now fired with ambition and eager to do something to attract the favorable attention of those higher up.

This feeling that the future is full of hope for better things extends through all lines of the service, for there is scarcely a man upon the Rio Grande who does not look forward to advancement of some sort with the opening of the Western Pacific.

For this reason the discipline upon the Rio Grande was never better than at present. Engineers are striving to make schedule time with their trains, and all the crews of both passenger and freight trains are doing their best to avoid anything that would bring criticism from their superiors or complaint from patrons of the road.

At every division point along the Rio Grande system the subject of daily discussion is this matter of promotion.

There is intense curiosity as to what men will remain with the Rio Grande and what men will go to the Western Pacific, what positions will fall to certain men who seem sure of promotion and what the effect will be in regard to promotions.

On a big railroad there are two very mysterious things: Promotion and dismissal.

A railroad in a high position never knows with certainty just how he stands with the "men higher up." It is said that there have been times when the head officials of the Rio Grande have made tours of inspection during which in their demeanors they have betrayed no sign of dissatisfaction with what came under their observation, yet heads fell soon afterwards. On the other hand, tours of inspection have been made which have resulted in promotions. These were as unexpected as the dismissals.

The usual system of silence concerning what is to be done in the way of promotions has been maintained in connection with the opening of the Western Pacific. It is said that the general officers have not yet allowed the least inkling of their plans to escape, although the time for action in the matter of selecting men for the Western Pacific is near at hand.

It was rumored yesterday that there is a possibility that men who have "made good" on other western railroads than the Rio Grande are being considered for positions on the Western Pacific. It was hinted that the men would strive to get the strongest men that it is possible to secure, irrespective of their present railroad connections.

Several men who are conspicuous for their activities for other railroads than the Rio Grande were seen yesterday and asked about the possibility of their leaving their old positions on the Western Pacific. All of them seemed startled and some betrayed signs of uneasiness, but every one of them denied that proposals had been made to them by representatives of the new line.

NEW DAIRY COMPANY.

Strong Concern Enters Local Field.

The Jensen Creamery company, which has recently succeeded to the business of the defunct Faust Creamery company, starts under the most favorable auspices. Mr. W. F. Jensen, the president and general manager, is among the best known men in this country in this line. He has for many years been general manager of the Continental Creamery company at Topeka, Kan. I. N. Parker, the vice president and assistant general manager, has, through his connection with local dairy interests, established a wide and valuable acquaintance with the producers of Utah and Idaho. A. P. Henningsen, the secretary and treasurer, has been located in Butte for over twenty years, and as general manager of the Henningsen Produce company has succeeded in building up a business which exceeds $5,000,000 annually.

The Jensen Creamery company has financial backing such as is possessed by few institutions, and with the natural advantages of Salt Lake as a center to do business its success seems assured.

FOUR COUNTY FAIR PLANS

Board of Control Holds Session in Weber Club and Maps Out Program for Displays.

The board of control of the Four County fair met at the Weber club parlors yesterday morning at 9 o'clock and was called to order by the president of the Intermountain Fair association.

The board of control unanimously decided that William Glasmann should be elected president and director general of the fair and that four vice-presidents, one from each county, be elected. County Commissioner A. W. Valentine was elected for Box Elder, County Commissioner John Walsh was elected for Davis county, Fruit Tree Inspector Hyrum Phillips for Morgan county and David McKay was elected for Weber county, and also to be the first vice-president.

It was decided that each of the outside counties should have one day set apart. It was agreed by lot that Davis county should have the first day, Morgan the second, Box Elder the third, and that each county should make its own arrangements and program for the day's entertainment. Then the question came up regarding the location of the 1909 fair, Brigham City and Farmington developed as competitors and it was unanimously decided to ask the legislature to give some aid to the fair and that the president be directed to call the board of control together as soon as the legislature has taken action upon this matter.

The mayors, county commissioners, fruit tree inspectors of the four counties were present, except the mayors of Kaysville, Bountiful, Huntsville and Ogden.

At 12 o'clock Judge A. R. Heywood, president of the Weber club, invited the fair promoters to be the club's guests at luncheon.

Because his horse was balky, P. H. Whitaker, the driver of a meat wagon for the Cardon firm at Five Points, beat the animal over the head with a big club near Saltville about 10 o'clock yesterday morning until the horse fell dead in the road.

Cardon hitched upon another horse and continued driving over his route, while residents of the vicinity who had witnessed the act telephoned to the sheriff's office.

After a chase extending from 10 o'clock until late yesterday afternoon, Deputy Sheriff P. J. Nylm and Sergeant Fred Toot located Whitaker at the Utah Hot Springs, ten miles from the city, placing him under arrest.

The horse's head was beaten almost to a pulp, according to the officers, who found the dead animal by the roadside.
